AUTUMN 2008

Tastes of Autumn in Japan

Autumn in Japan is truly a feast for the senses. It's the time of year to get out and enjoy brilliant foliage, called "koyo". Popular places to experience "koyo" are Nikko and Hakone in the east and Kyoto and Nara in the west. It's also the season to indulge in "aki no mikaku," the literal tastes of autumn. Making an appearance on many menus are persimmons, chestnuts, sweet potatoes, and the seasonal, aromatic "matsutake" mushrooms.

The Longer You Stay, the More You Save at The Prince Park Tower Tokyo

An exclusive offer for PCI members gives you an attractive rate for the first three nights and an even lower rate for following nights. Centrally located, The Prince Park Tower Tokyo is just steps from autumn foliage in Shiba Park and the historic Zojoji Temple. The 673-room hotel offers everything you need for dining, exercise, relaxation and entertainment - right on property. It features 14 restaurants and lounges, shopping, a natural "onsen" (hot spring bath) within the spa and state-of-the-art fitness center, massage, a beauty salon, an indoor pool and even a bowling center. There is a subway station within walking distance, a free shuttle to JR Hamamatsu Cho Train Station and direct access to the airport via limousine bus.

Exclusive offer! Earn 1,500 miles on American or United Airlines per stay.
